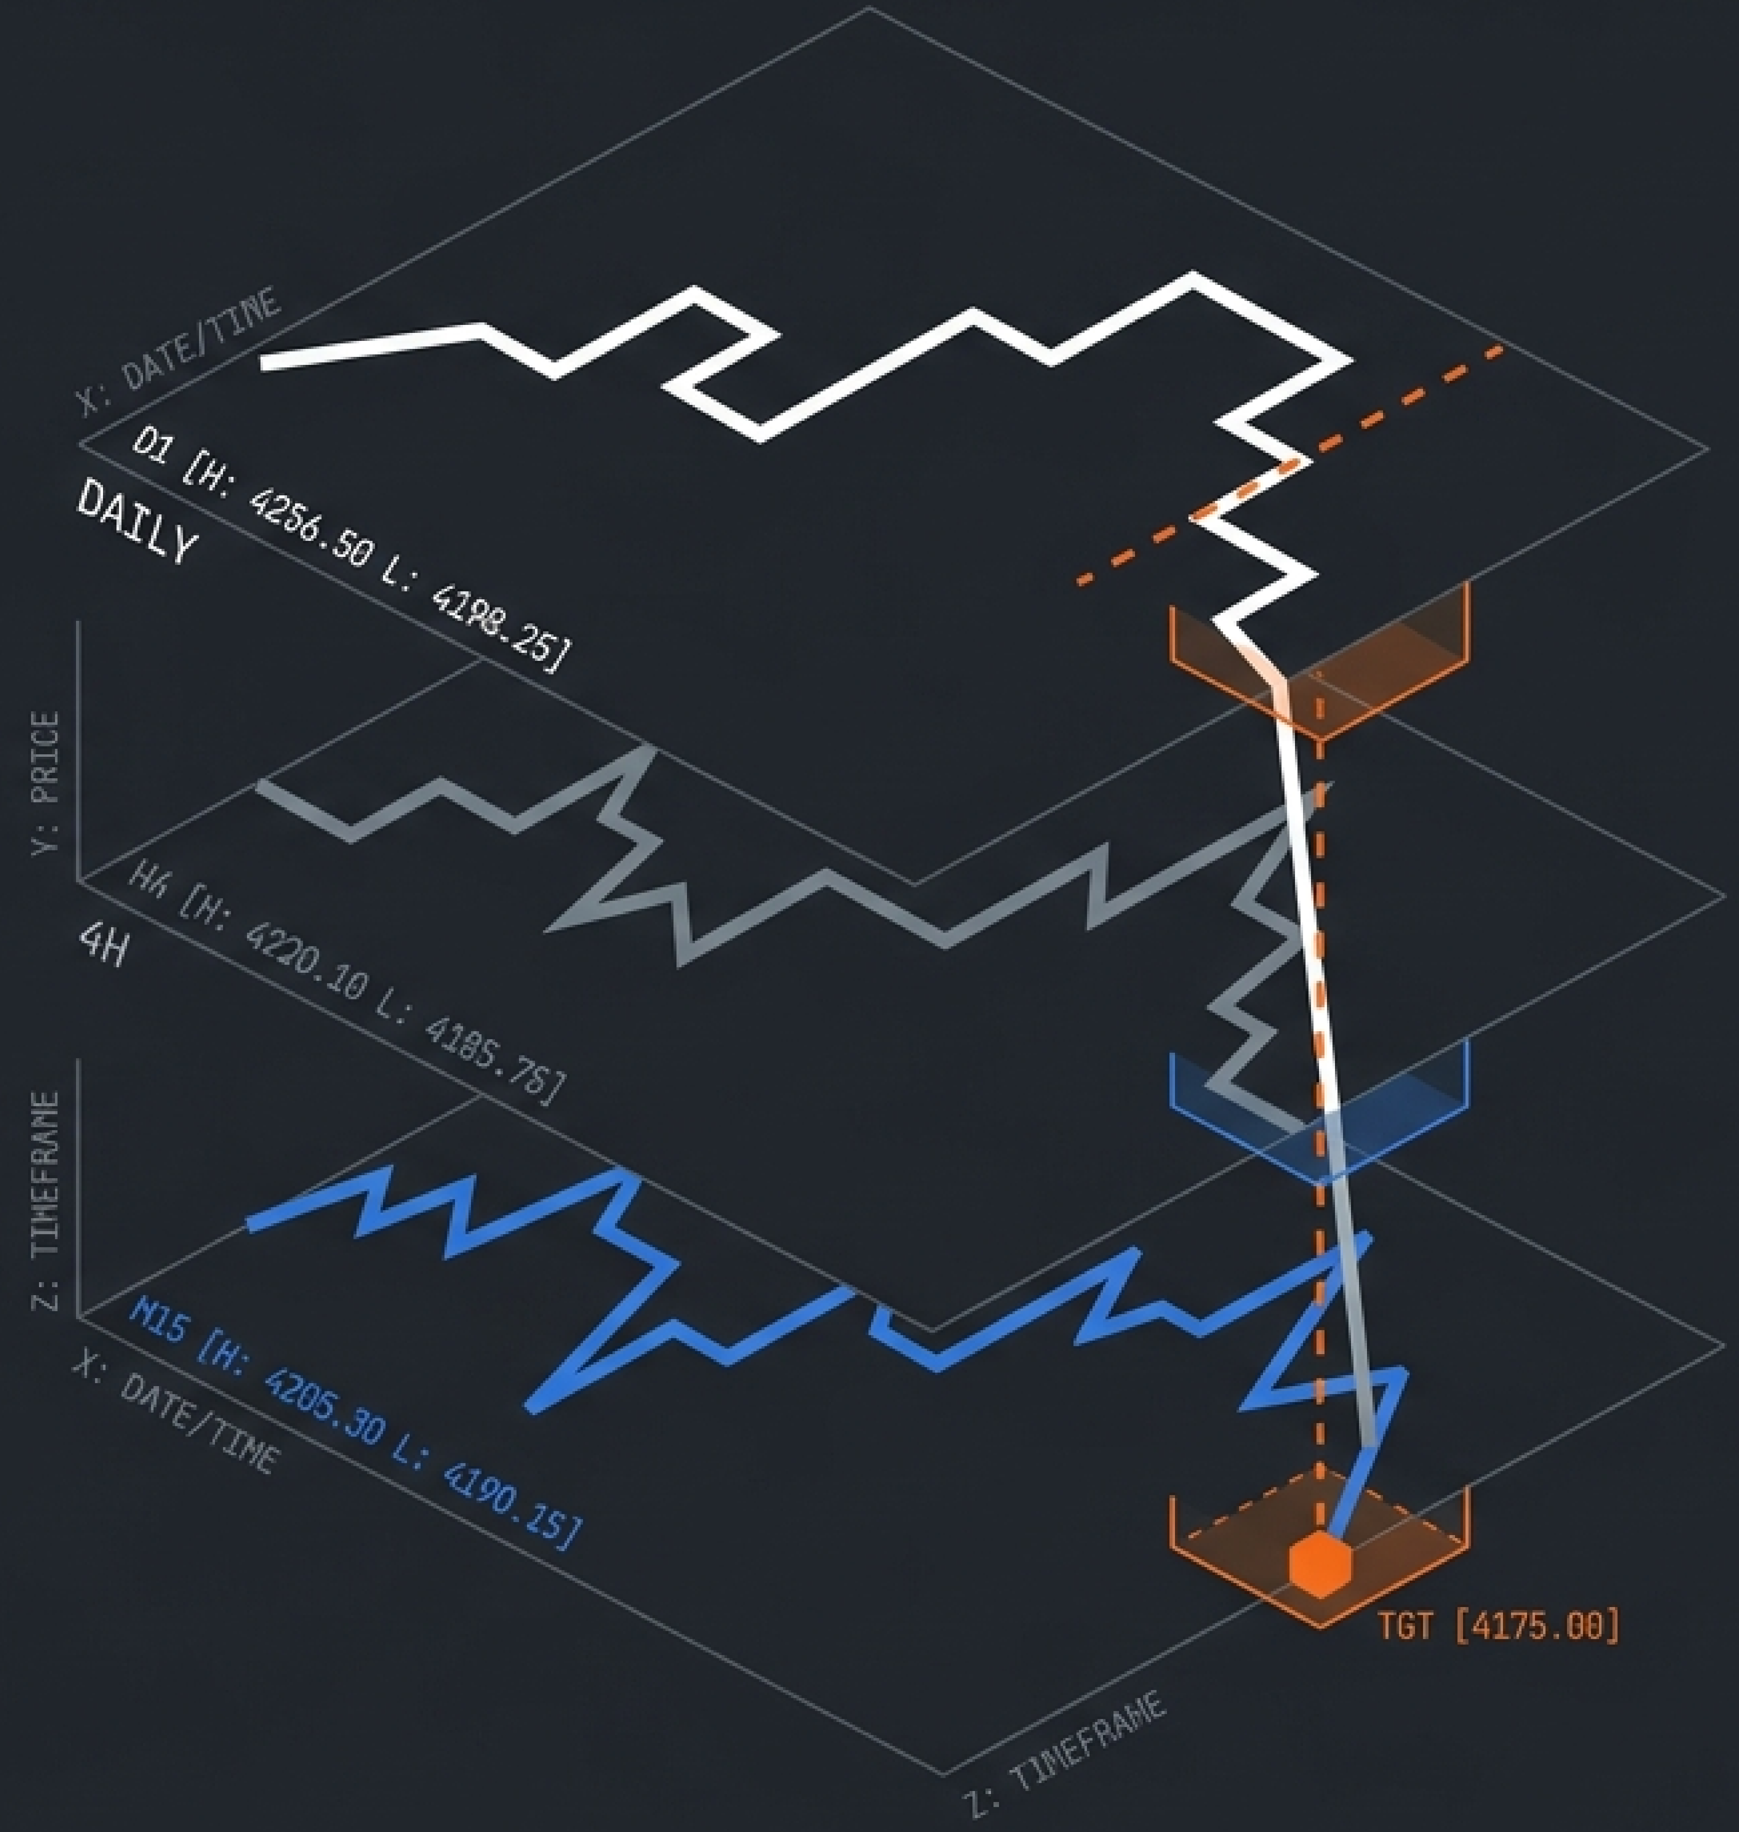
Day Trading Crash Course #5

Mastering the Daily & 4H Combo Strategy

- A top-down structural approach to swing trading.
- Eliminating market noise through precise multi-timeframe alignment.



High-Timeframe Structure Overrides Low-Timeframe Noise

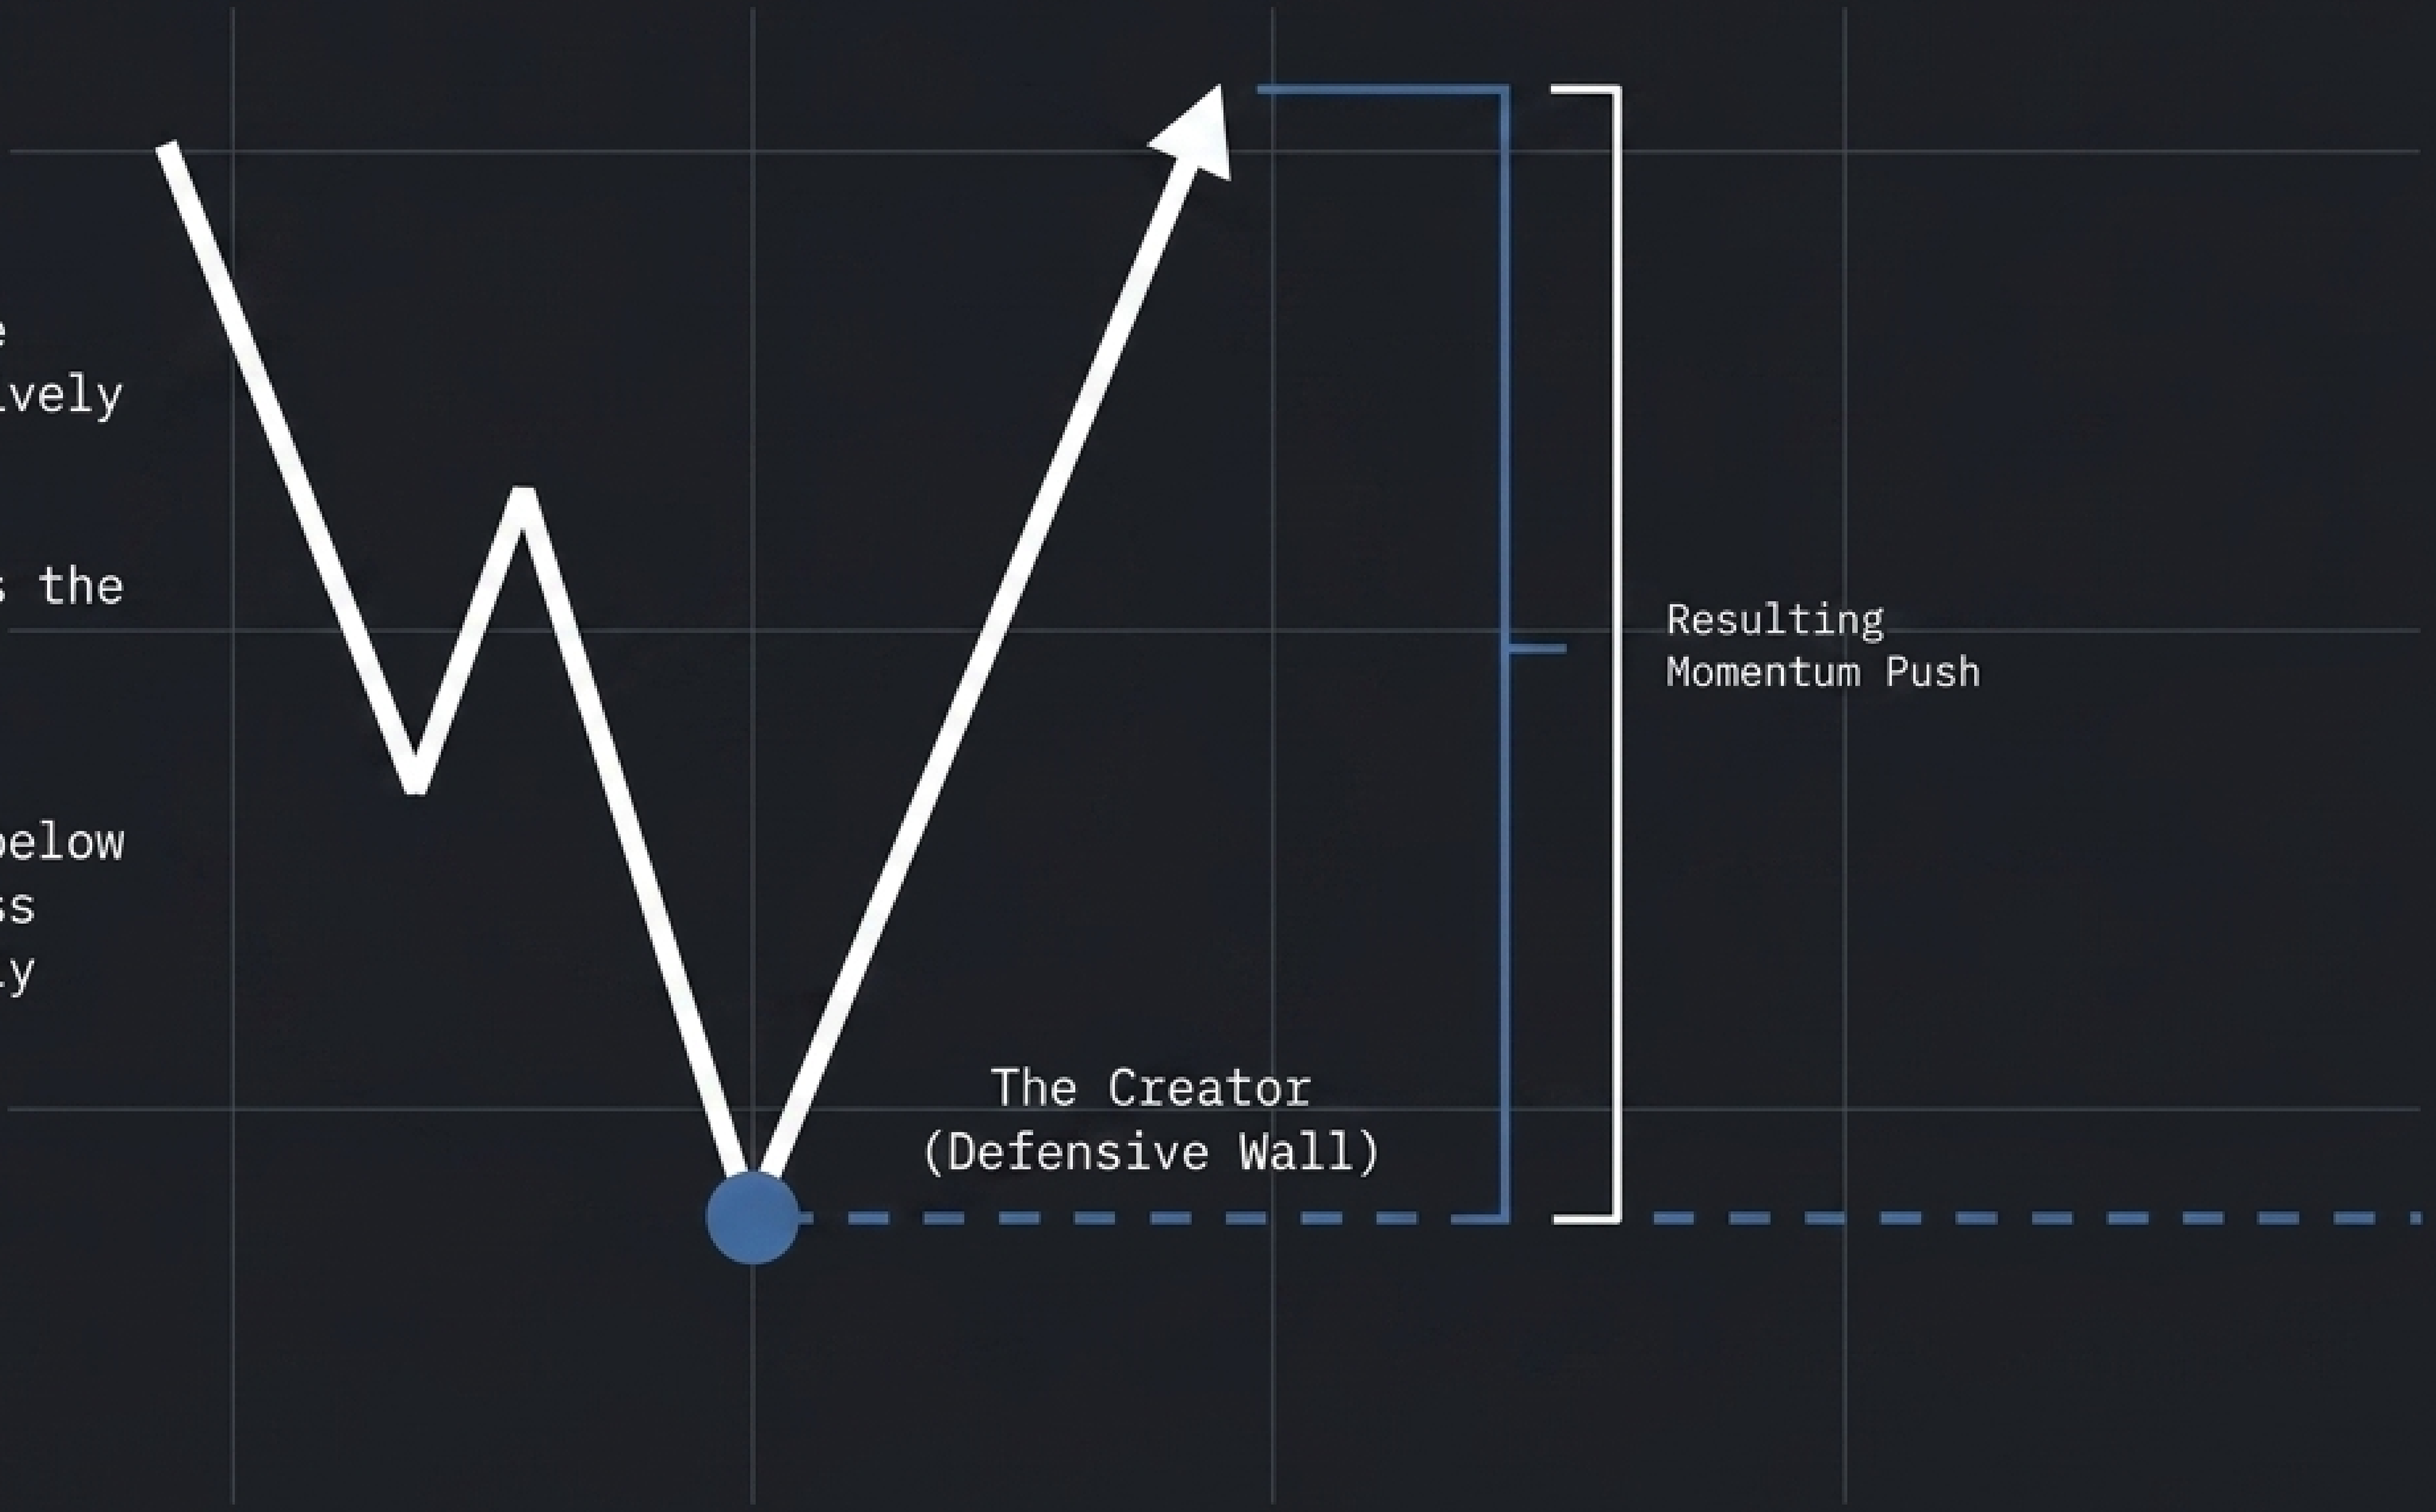
The Daily chart reveals true, underlying institutional momentum.

Intermediate timeframes process the necessary price corrections.

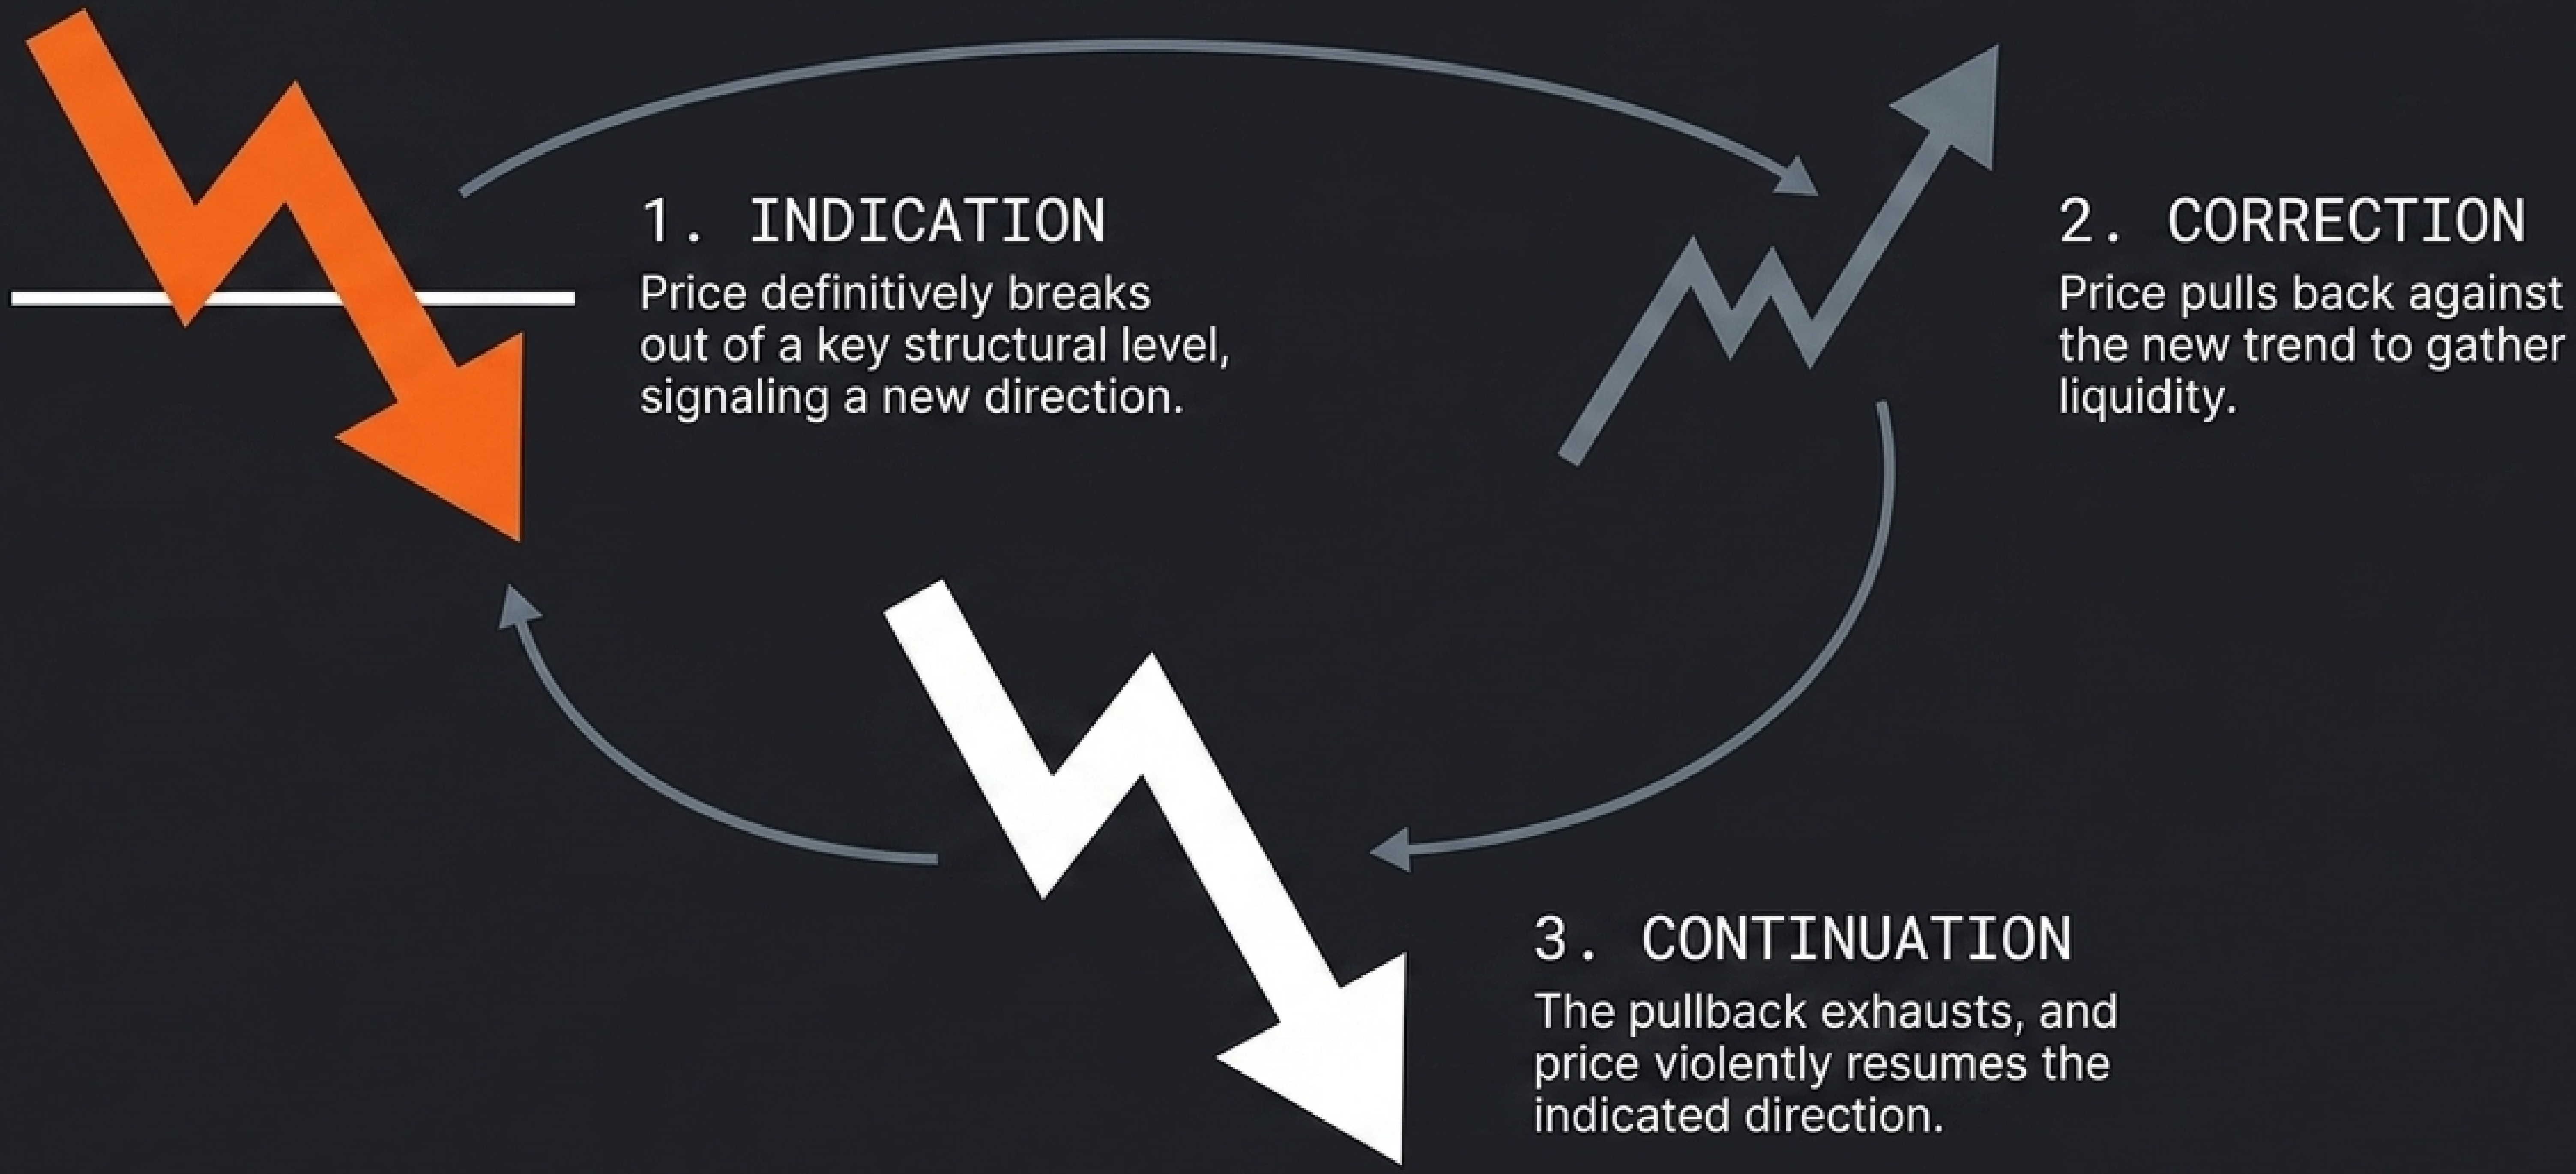
Micro timeframes are strictly utilized to time entries in the direction of the macro trend.

Market Anatomy and The Original Creator

- A swing point occurs where buyers or sellers aggressively step into the market.
- This "original creator" is the definitive cause of the subsequent price push.
- Price should never break below the original creator unless the macro trend is actively reversing.

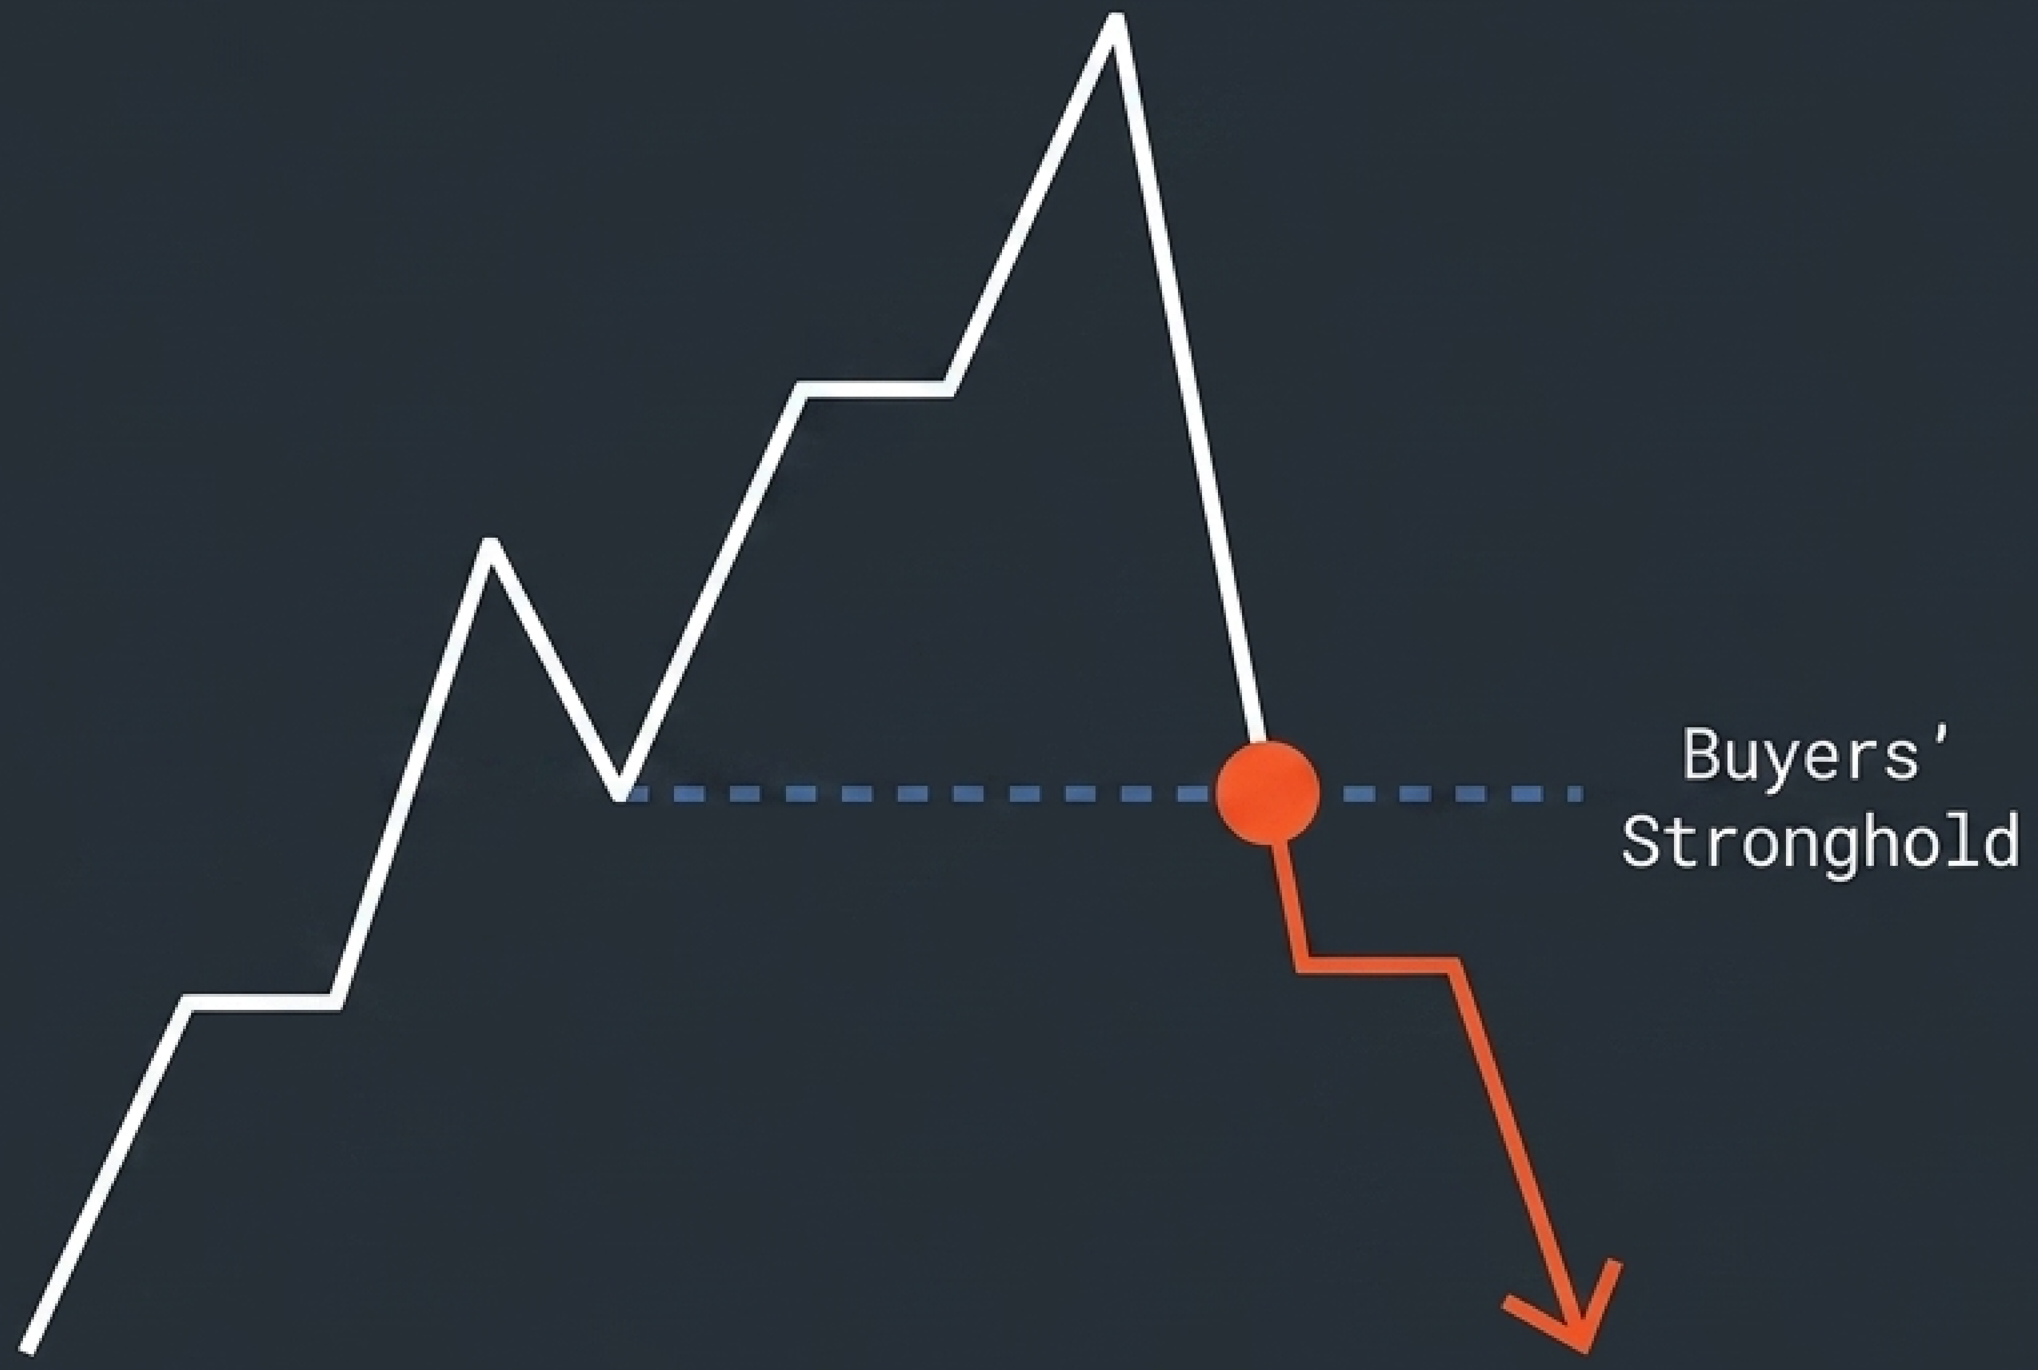


The 3-Step I.C.C. Market Engine

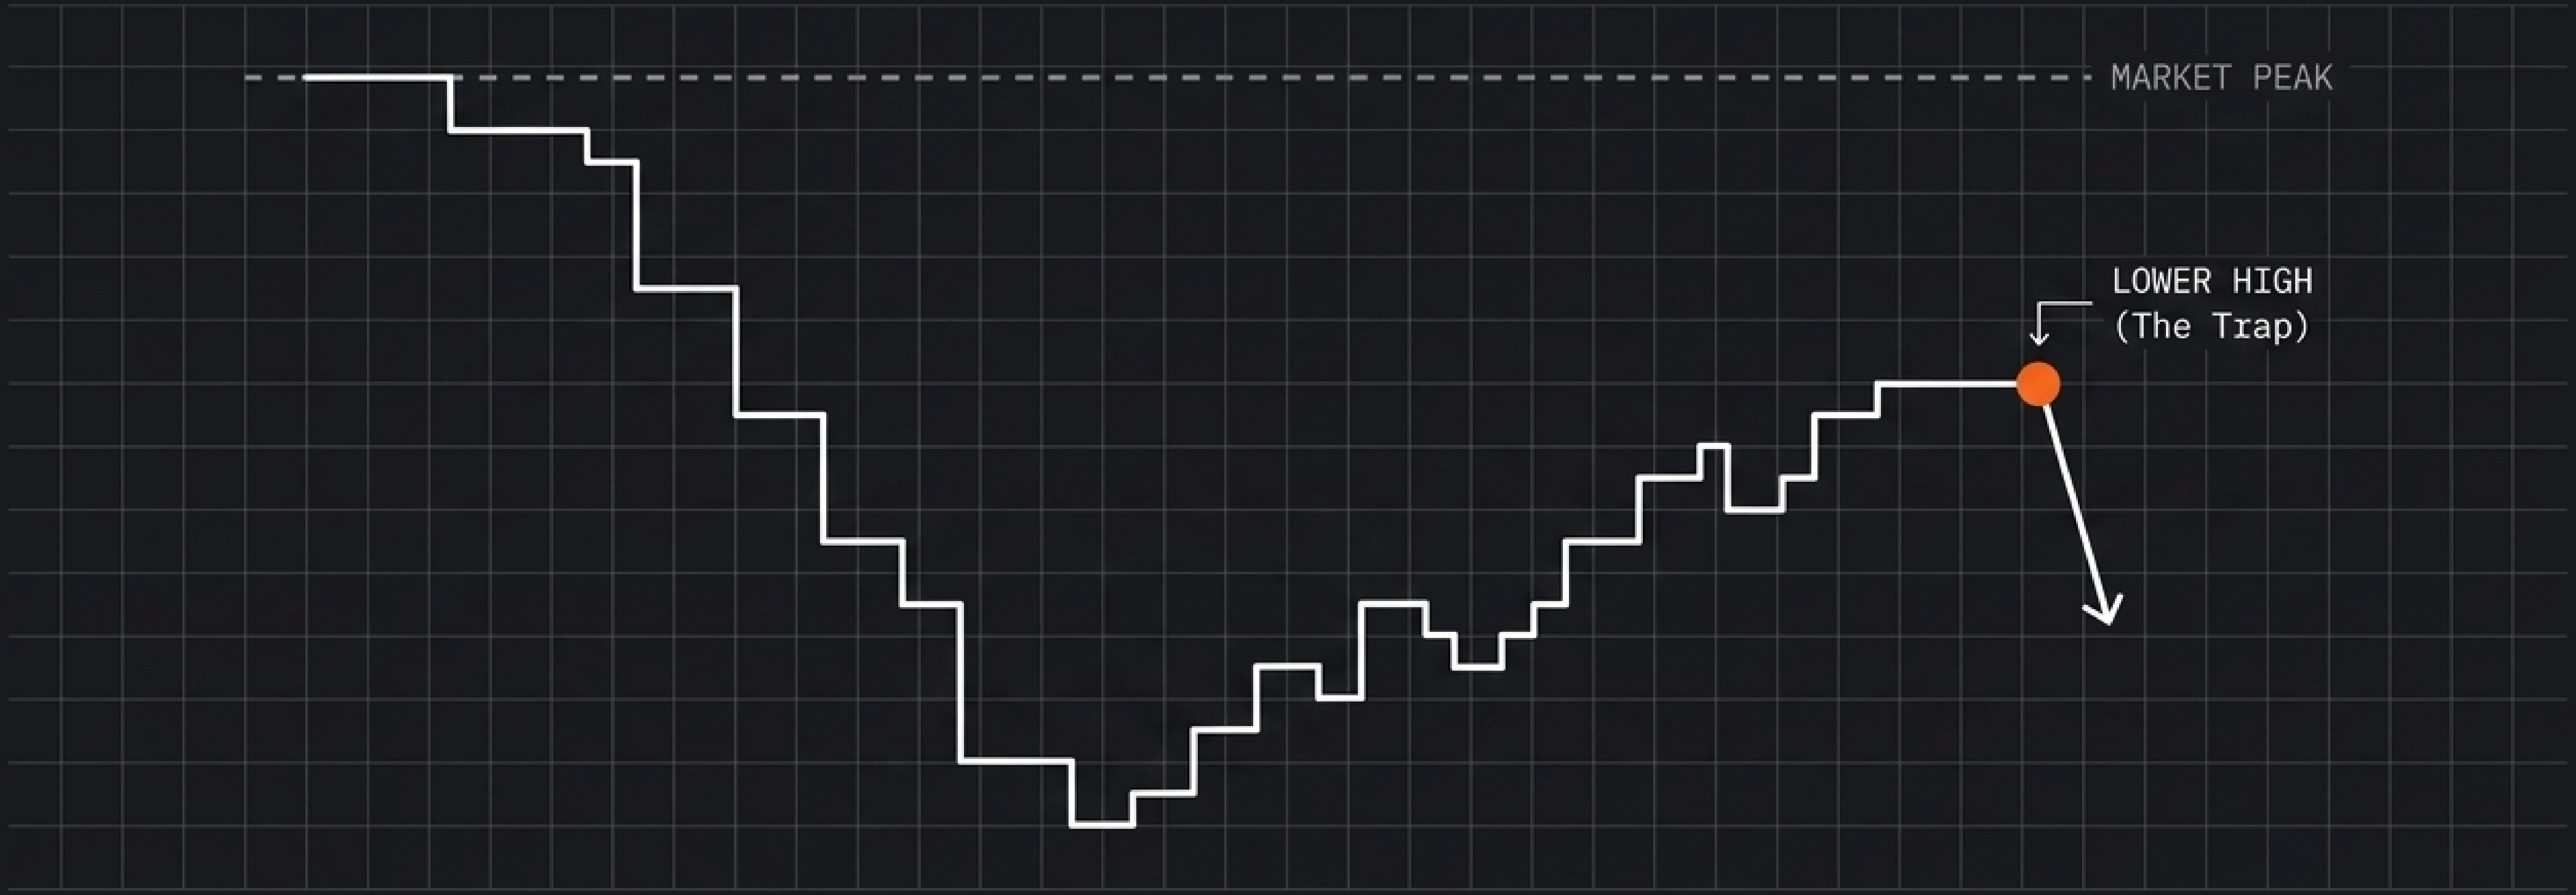


Validating the Bearish Indication

- Executing a short position requires bypassing the buyers' previous stronghold.
- A bearish indication is validated the exact moment price breaks an established swing low.
- This structural breach confirms that sellers have entirely absorbed the buyers' momentum.



Identifying the Correction Trap



The Bullish Push

Following a bearish indication, price will inevitably initiate a temporary bullish push.

The Misleading Sequence

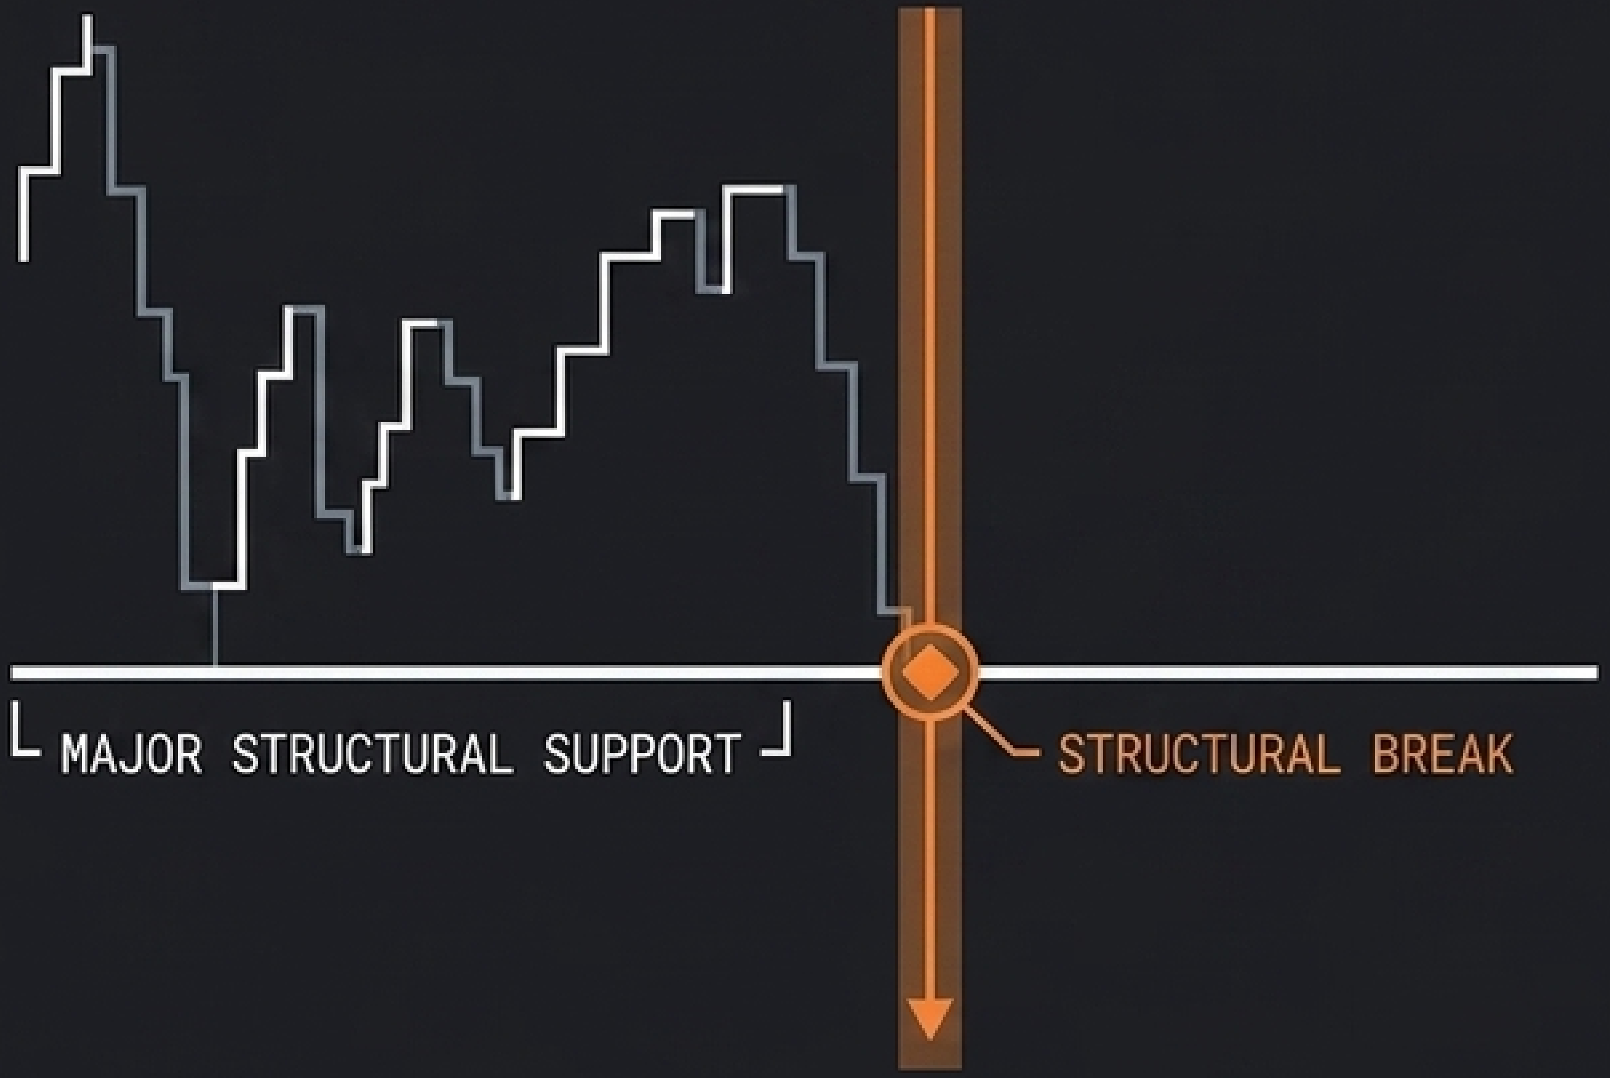
This phase builds a false sequence of higher highs and higher lows on smaller timeframes to bait retail buyers.

The Exhaustion Point

The correction officially dies when price stops advancing and establishes a definitive lower high.

The Daily & 4H Combo Architecture

DAILY VIEW (Macro)



- Identify the macro Indication.
- Locate major structural boundaries.

4H VIEW (Setup)

- Track the Correction phase.
- Wait for the pullback to hit the Daily structural level.

THE INTERLOCK: Execution occurs when the 4H correction exhausts itself precisely at the Daily boundary.

Micro-Structure Precision Entry

1. Scale Down

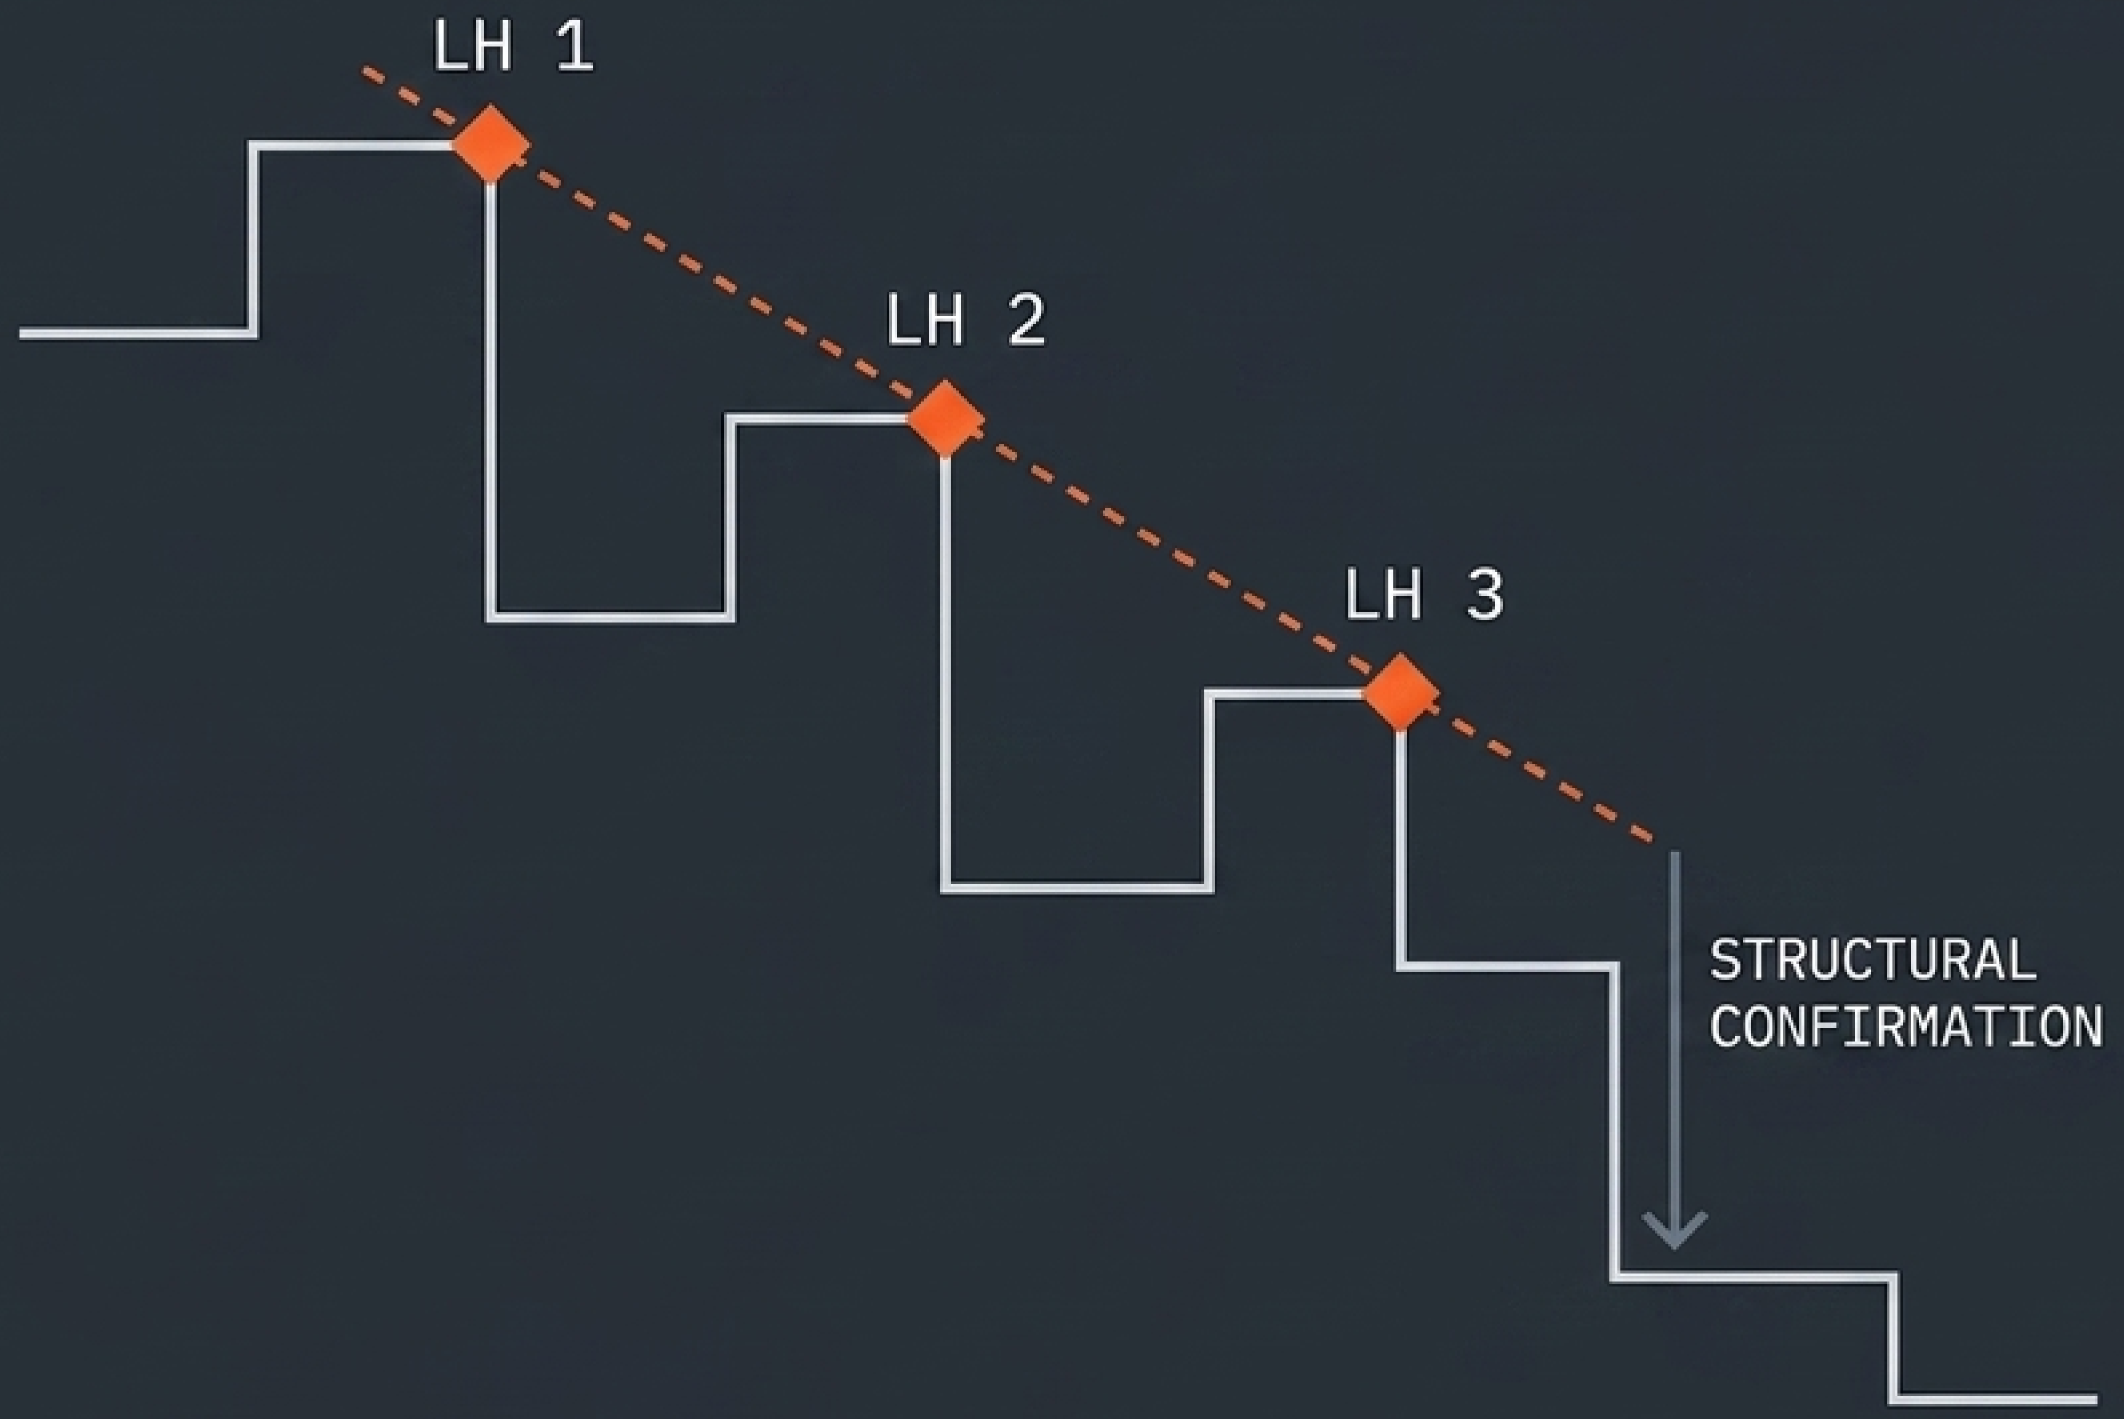
Shift strictly to the 1H or 15m chart once price reaches the designated macro area of interest.

2. Monitor the Break

Wait patiently for the 4H correction's local uptrend to structurally break and fail.

3. Confirm the Shift

A clear sequence of multiple lower highs confirms volume has permanently shifted back to the sellers.



Structural Risk and Reward Placement

STOP LOSS

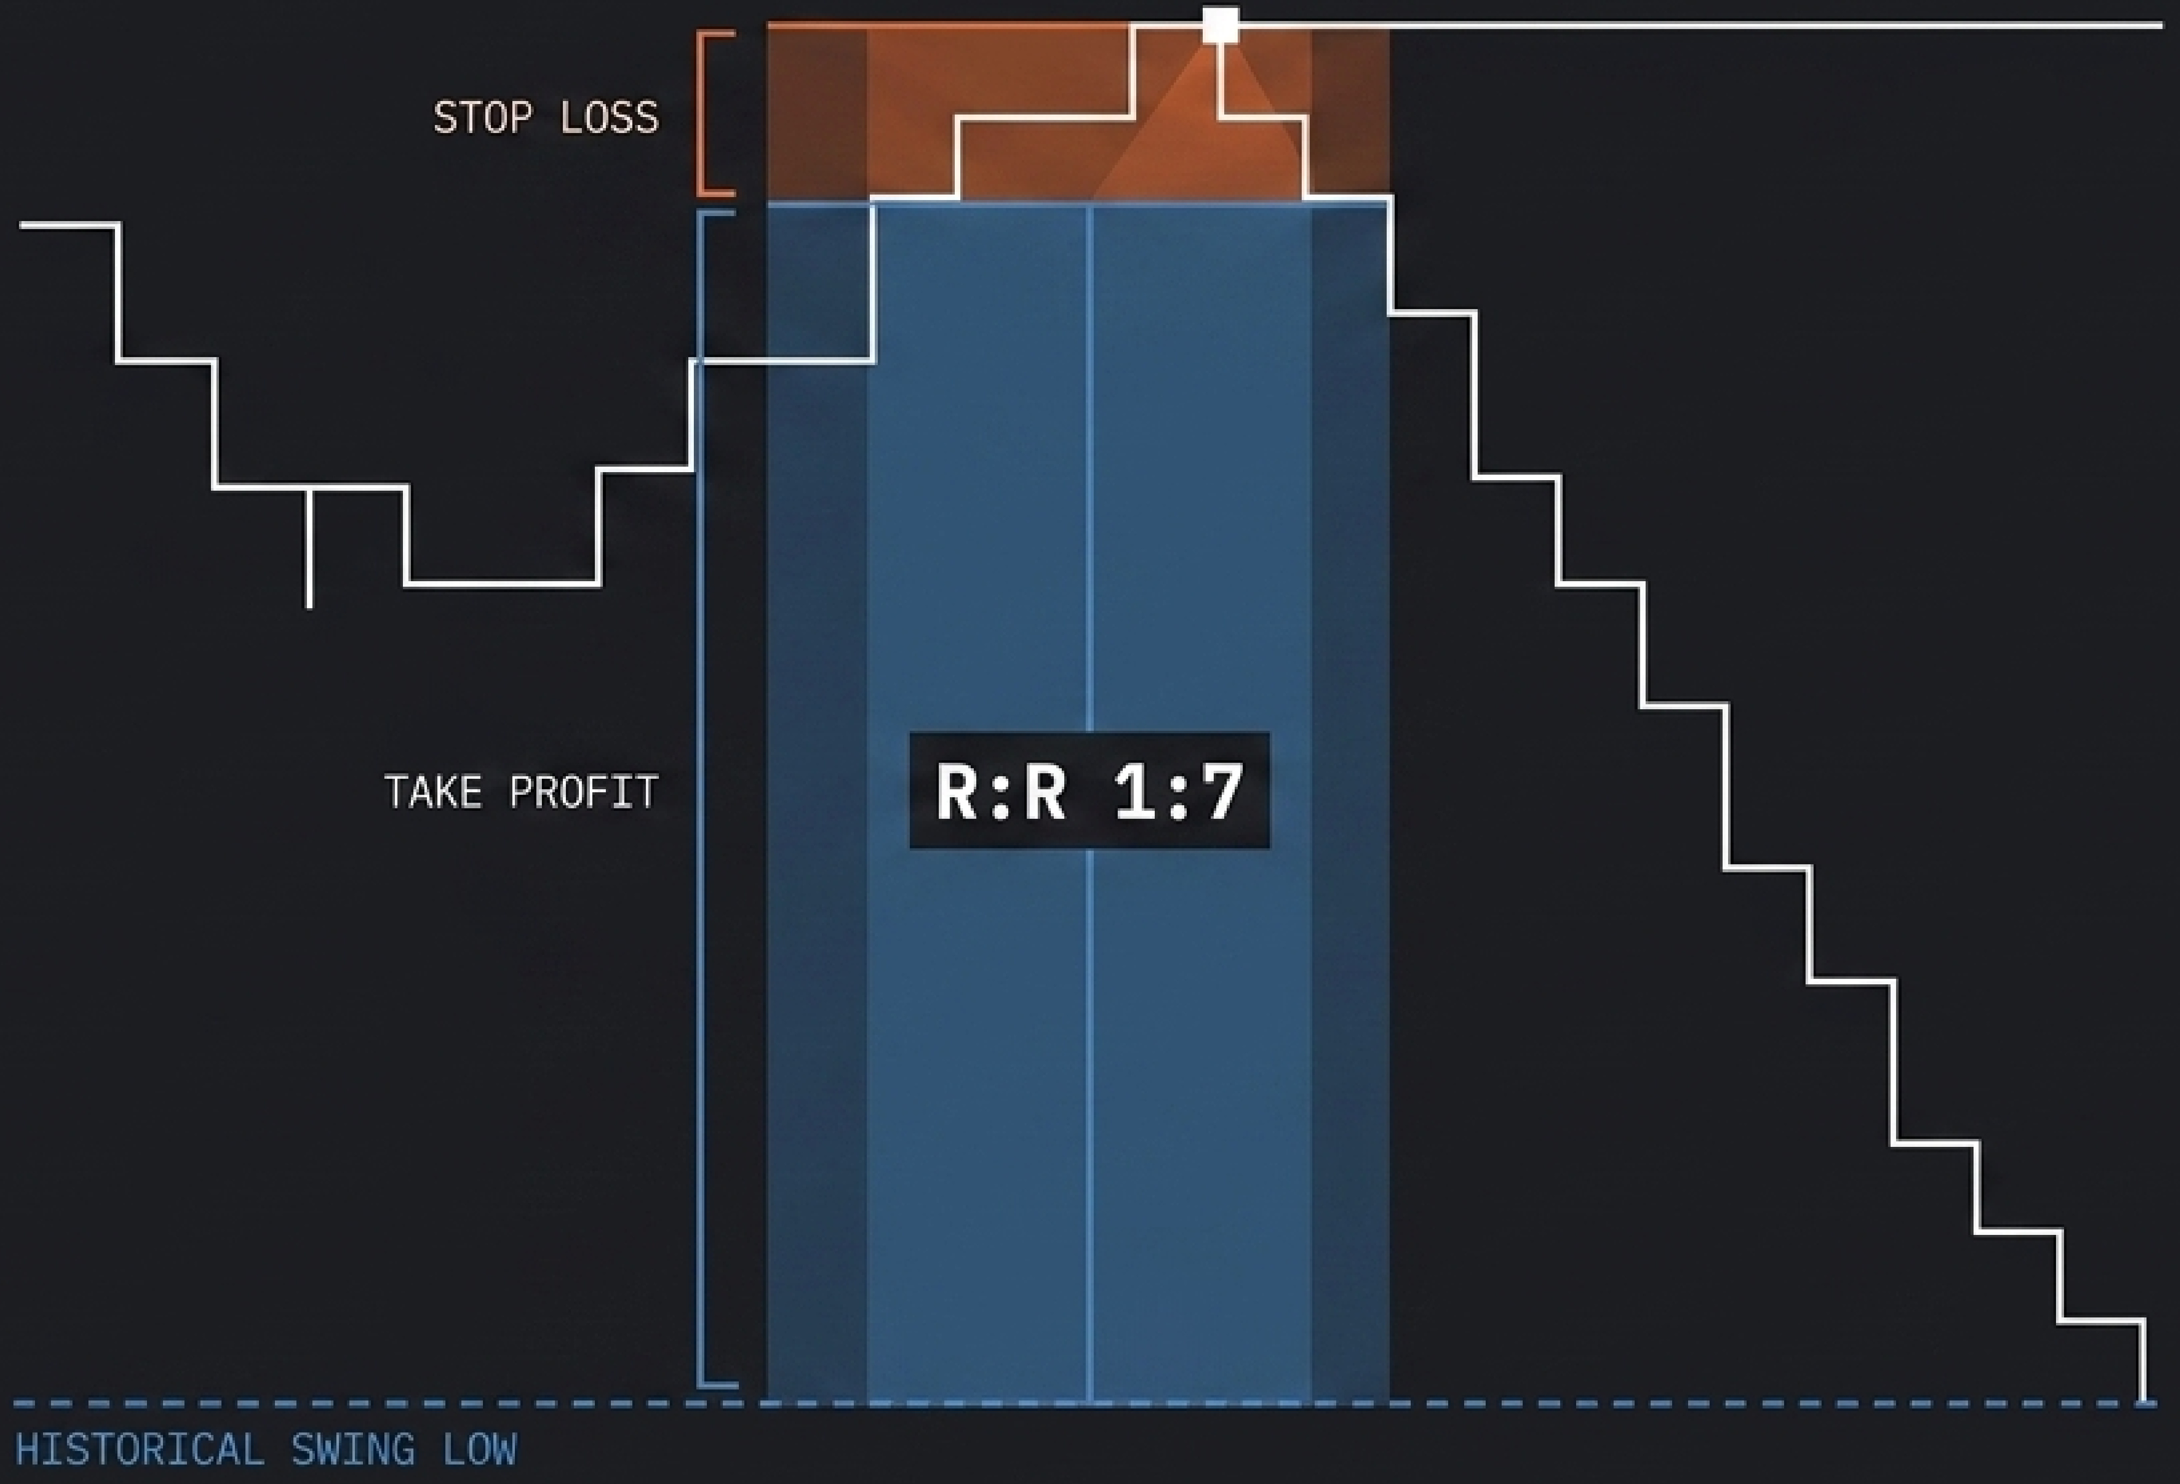
Placed directly above the most recent lower high (the immediate "creator" of the micro sell-off).

TAKE PROFIT

Targets the old swing low that caused the initial upward movement.

THE GOLDEN RULE

Let structure dictate risk. Allow the market to hit your target or structurally invalidate the thesis.



The Catalyst of Institutional Volume

- High-timeframe structural breaks require immense volume to execute properly.
- Align entries strictly with the London or New York trading sessions.
- Avoid dead zones; the ICC Continuation relies entirely on institutional volume to drive momentum.
